

UNIT-1

Introduction to Hotel Management

Learning Outcomes

By the end of this unit the learner will be able to:

- ✓ Explore various characteristics of the hospitality industry.
- ✓ Explain the relationship between the hospitality industry and tourism.
- ✓ Explore major hotel departments and their functions.

Unit 1

Introduction to Hotel Management

What is Hospitality?

There is no single and simple definition of the term 'hospitality'. Many people have tried to describe the hospitality industry in different ways. Some have tried to summarise the scope of the industry and its characteristics involving both tangible and intangible features in the service delivery process. Others have attempted to describe the industry by exploring the stakeholders involved, the mutual benefits generated and the industry's impacts on society and the economy.

Broadly speaking, hospitality is the act of kindness in welcoming and looking after the basic needs of customers or strangers, mainly in relation to food, drink and accommodation. A contemporary explanation of hospitality refers to the relationship process between a customer and a host. When we talk about the "Hospitality Industry", we are referring to the companies or organisations that provide food and/or drink and/or accommodation to people who are "away from home". However, this definition of the "Hospitality Industry" does not cover all situations.

Characteristics of the Hospitality Industry

Different from other sectors, the hospitality industry is unique in its nature, which tends to be service-oriented with a strong emphasis on human exchange in the service delivery processes. A summary of key characteristics relating to the hospitality industry is provided in Figure 1.1 below:

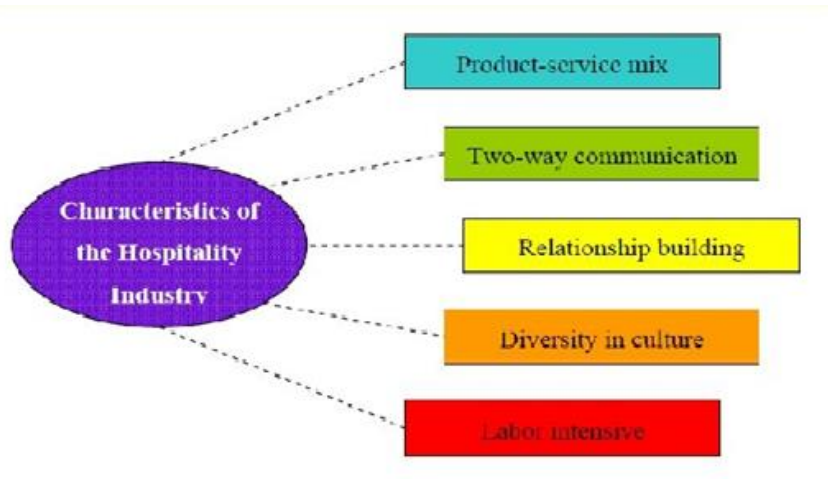

Fig. 1.1

1) Product-Service Mix

In the hospitality industry, customers rarely consume pure products; rather, they consume a mixture of products and services. For example, one who dines in a restaurant will pay not only for the food and drinks but also for the services provided by the servers. The bill will cover both the tangible and intangible experience.

Tangible features include, for example, a steak as the main course, a glass of house wine, well-groomed service staff and pleasant décor in the restaurant. Intangible features include, for example, a comfortable dining atmosphere or the friendly attitude of staff.

A successful hospitality business depends not only on its products and services but also on how they are delivered. The qualities of staff and the way they deliver the service are often more important than the tangible products in making a hospitality experience satisfactory or unsatisfactory. Hence, the two features can contribute to the total experience in the service delivery process.

As products and other tangible features can be easily imitated by competitors, hospitality operations that aim for high-end customers and 'superior' quality gradually spend more and more resources in enhancing the service standard as a strategy of differentiation.

2) Two-way Communication

In order to achieve service excellence in the hospitality industry, two-way communication is a critical factor which requires the involvement and participation of both customers and service staff in the service delivery process. Through interactions with customers, important messages about their needs and expectations can be received by service staff for their immediate actions to create customer satisfaction. Interactions between internal staff or between departments are also critical since the customer's total experience of lodging or food and beverage services usually involves teamwork and an exchange of information within the organisation.

3) Relationship Building

The hospitality industry is highly dependent on repeat customers for survival. Building long-term relationships with customers can benefit organisations by generating stable revenues regardless of the season and, at the same time, developing brand reputations through positive word of mouth from repeat customers. In order to develop brand loyalty, different methods are currently applied by the lodging and food service sectors, such as membership programmes which give privileges and incentives to frequent customers. However, top managements of organisations believe that the informal ways of building "friendships" between front-line staff and customers through a high degree of personal attention and customisation can win the loyalty of customers in the long run.

4) Diversity in Culture

As hospitality is closely related to the tourism industry, it is not surprising that people involved in this sector, be they customers or staff, are experiencing diversity in culture through interactions with others. Staff who work in a hospitality organisation always have interactions with customers from different regions, and they work and cooperate with colleagues who may have different backgrounds or cultures. Due to the differences in their religious beliefs and values, some conflicts and misunderstandings can easily occur. Therefore, staff should be open-minded and work together to resolve problems in their duties. For example, some customers abstain from meat due to their religious beliefs or habits. Therefore, restaurants should provide vegetarian food as an option in order to satisfy their needs.

From the staff's perspective, eating any food products containing pork should be avoided in the presence of Muslim colleagues in order to show respect for their religious beliefs.

Such cultural diversity implies that local staff should generally understand different cultures in order to provide flexible services to customers based on their national cultures and to achieve harmony and cooperation with colleagues of different nationalities.

5) Labour-intensive

Since the hospitality industry is service-oriented in nature, it requires a huge supply of labour to create a memorable experience for the customers. This characteristic is especially true of those enterprises that target high-end customers. For example, staff-to-guest ratios are high in fine-dining restaurants and 5-star hotels which aim to provide one-on-one services to their customers. Although advances in technology certainly contribute to the replacement of some simple tasks in the whole service process, customers who are concerned with the element of 'care' generally expect a high degree of human contact and personalised services in their consumption experiences. This explains why the industry always has a high demand for labour and is willing to spend time and resources training and recruiting potential candidates to join the workforce of the hospitality industry.

Relationship between the Hospitality Industry and Tourism

Scope of the Hospitality Industry

"Guests" means those who are away from their homes; the term has therefore generated a perception that the hospitality industry should include or overlap with the tourism industry to a certain extent. Without a clear definition of the scope of the hospitality industry, some have suggested that it should cover not only all lodging and food service operations but also other tourism-related operations, such as airlines and theme parks. Others have considered combining hospitality and tourism in one industry. An example of categorisation is shown in Figure 1.2.

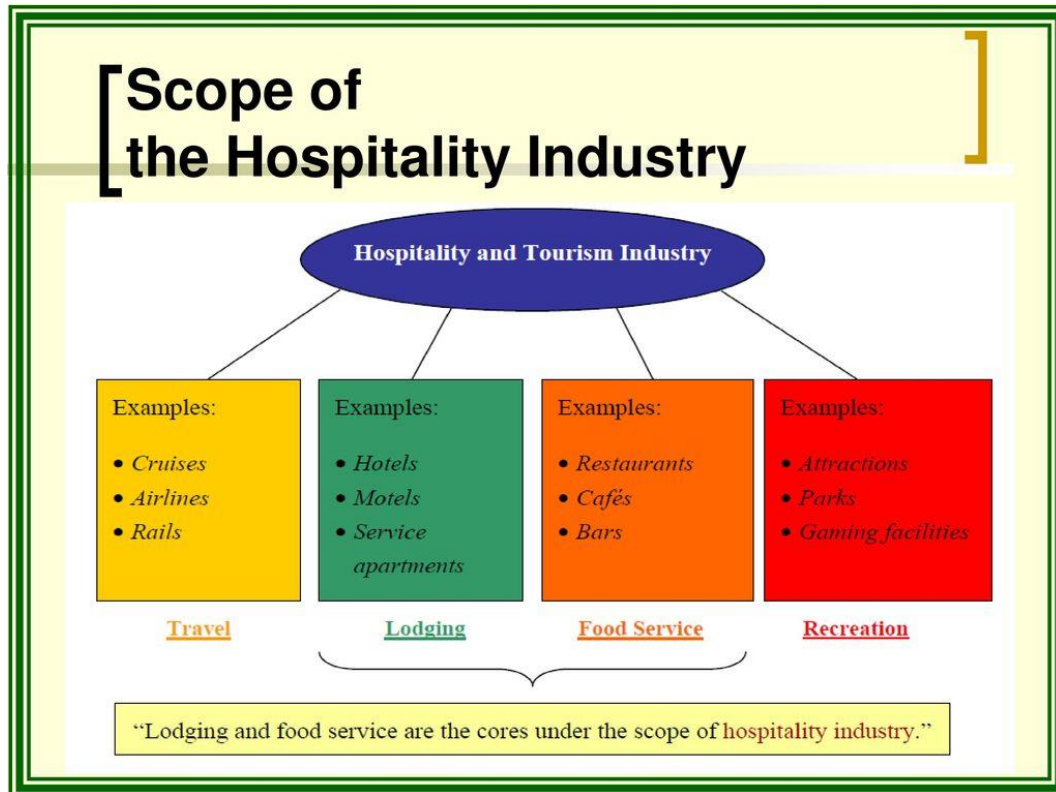

Fig. 1.2

There are two main business sectors in the hospitality industry:

Accommodation – To provide accommodation (and usually food and drink) to people who, for whatever reason, are away from home

Food and beverage – To provide food and beverage to local, commuting, transient customers and tourists
These two sectors will be covered in more detail in subsequent units.

As we have seen, the hospitality industry includes hotels and restaurants, as well as many other types of organisations or institutions that offer food, drink, shelter and other related services. These products and services are offered not only to people away from home, but also to local customers. A manager in the hospitality industry, therefore, must keep in mind the following three objectives:

- 1) Making the customers feel welcome personally;
- 2) Making things work for the customers; and
- 3) Making sure that the operation will continue to provide service and meet its budget.

Career Prospects in Hospitality Industry

There are always pros and cons of working in the hospitality industry. Whether a position suits an individual or not is mainly dependent on his/her own character and personal interests. Some general views, both positive and negative, about career prospects in the hospitality industry are summarised below as a reference for those who may be intending to join this unique and challenging industry.

1. Positive Views

a) Variety of Career Choices

Due to the booming development of the hospitality and tourism industry, many new hotels and restaurants are being opened to cater for the needs of both visitors and locals. This facilitates a huge demand for labour in the market, especially in some developing countries. There is a broad, range of jobs including back-of-the-house and front-of-the-house positions in the hospitality industry. Some positions open to graduates according to their certificates or diplomas relating to hospitality are highlighted in Table 1.1 below:

Accommodation Sector	Food Service Sector	Other Related Sectors
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Front desk receptionist • Room attendant • Telephone operator • Reservations • Concierge • Bellman/Doorman • Business centre associate 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Waiter / waitress • Host / hostess • Cashier • Food runner/Busser • Bartender • Apprentice • Commis • Banquet server 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Tour guide • Tour escort • Travel agent • Theme park crew • Event sales • Other “customer service” positions

Table 1.1 — Career Opportunities for Graduates of Hospitality Programmes

b) Opportunities to Meet People from Various Backgrounds

As mentioned earlier, the success of a hospitality service is highly dependent on the human contact between staff and customers. Having a chance to work in the industry, particularly in some front-line positions, opens up many opportunities to meet and communicate with people of different backgrounds and cultures. For example, a hotel receptionist might perceive his/her position as that of a tourist ambassador, which can be enjoyable and challenging. The job satisfaction gained through winning customers’ smiles, as well as its interactive nature, makes the hospitality industry attractive to youngsters with an out-going character.

c) Long-Term Career Development

Most people have to start their careers at the entry level. However, the career paths are always quite clear to employees and there are always opportunities for them to be promoted and to proceed to management levels based on their experience and performance. Successful stories are numerous in this sector, and someone starting as a room attendant could become the general manager of a hotel.

Figure 1.3 shows a sample career path provided to employees by a famous fast food chain.

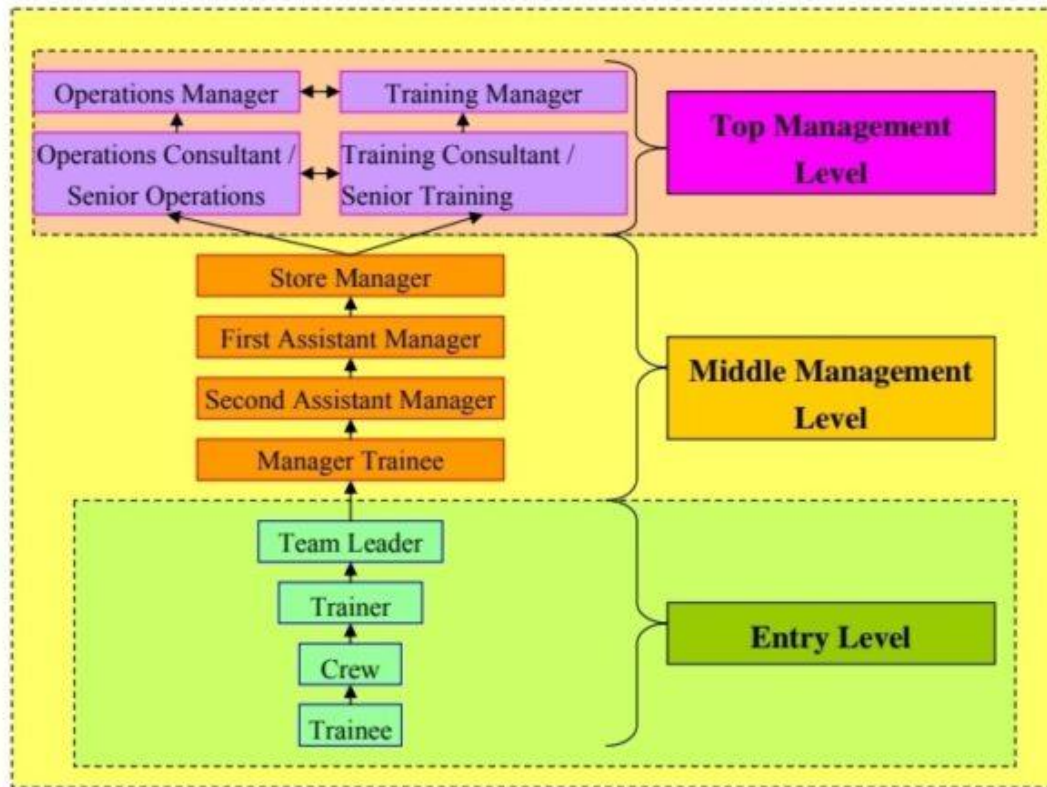

Figure 1.3 – Sample Career Path in a Fast Food Chain

d) Fringe Benefits Enjoyed by Employees

Unlike other business and service operations, staff working in hotels and food service operations will usually enjoy other benefits in addition to basic salaries, annual bonuses and insurance coverage. For example, hotel and restaurant staff are normally provided with two duty meals on their working days. Some hotel staff are also allowed to enjoy a discount rate or associate rate for booking rooms, which may even be applied to hotel outlets under the same brand all over the world.

2. Negative Views

a) Long and Non-Regular Working Hours

Shift work is very common in food and beverage and accommodation sectors. Although there are morning and evening shifts, some positions require staff to work overnight, such as night auditors on the front desk and security officers. As there are no such things as public holidays, staff are always required to work on weekends or special days, such as Christmas and Easter, etc. “Long working hours” seem to be the implicit norm of many positions in the hospitality industry. Over-time work due to labour shortages and peak seasons is commonplace for both operational staff and managers. Concerns about the bad effects on health and family life cause people to think twice about joining the industry.

b) Work under Pressure

In most situations, staff are expected to provide “quick” and “high-quality” services without keeping their customers waiting. The pressure of maintaining service efficiency and consistency, especially in peak seasons, can be intense. The need for frequent communications with customers in particular has exerted great pressure on staff in front-line positions. Having to deal with complaints or handle angry customers can discourage people from starting their careers in this industry.

c) Low Starting Salary

The hospitality industry offers many relatively low-skilled entry-level jobs. With the exceptions of management or positions which require fluency in multiple languages or specific skills, staff with no experience generally have low starting salaries. The differences between large-scale and small-scale hotels or food service operations lead to further variations in staff salaries.

d) Perceptions of Low Job Status

As mentioned above, many positions in the hospitality industry are low-skilled, and some people perceive their job status as relatively low compared with other industries, such as banking and finance. The misperceptions of ‘being a servant to others’ in the Chinese culture, as well as other negative views introduced above, have also discouraged many graduates from joining the industry.

The Accommodation Sector

Classification of Accommodation Establishment

There is no generic rule for classifying accommodation establishments globally. One method is to divide accommodation into two main groups:

- Non-commercial.
- Commercial.

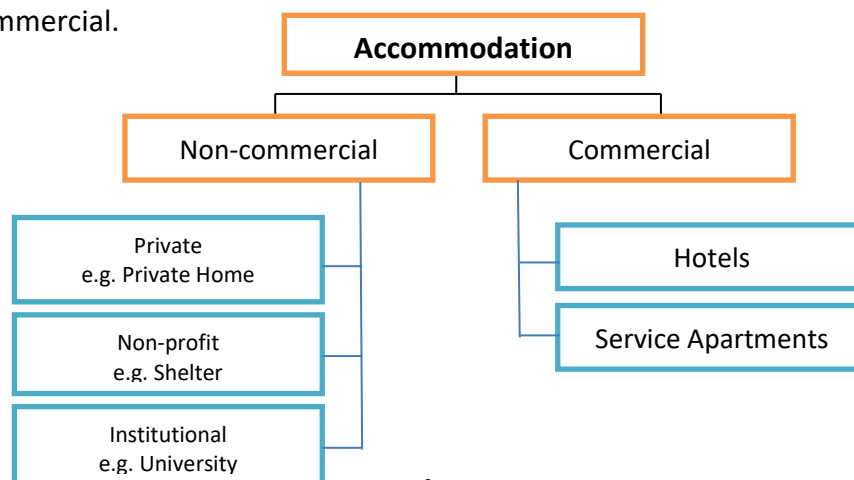

Fig. 1.4

Hotels and Their Classifications

As hotels are the predominant type of commercial accommodation we will therefore discuss in detail how hotels might be classified.

“Hotel” means an establishment owned by a proprietor offering sleeping accommodation to any person presenting him/herself who appears able and willing to pay a reasonable sum for the services and facilities provided and who is in a fit state to be received.

A hotel is classified as a commercial establishment providing accommodation, meals and other guest services. Originally guests had two choices:

- Luxury hotels; or
- Budget hotels.

In some countries, hotels were built to serve middle-class families; then, when the economy in general boomed and the supply of rooms increased, hoteliers focused on setting themselves apart by offering specialised accommodation for:

- Conventioneers;
- Business groups; and
- Special weekend events and families.

As diversity flourished, so did competition and brand loyalty. Anyone who can pay (within reason) can rent a room for a night in a hotel. Hotels vary greatly in style and services, from luxury, business, resort and townhouse to boutique and budget. A standard room will have a bed, bathroom facilities, shower, telephone, TV, lounge area and mini-bar. Housekeeping services available include laundry and dry-cleaning. Nowadays guests will usually have access to a wireless computer network and a business centre. Most major hotels will have restaurants and bars available for guests, and if they are situated in a large city they are usually located near the business districts, tourist destinations and/or airports.

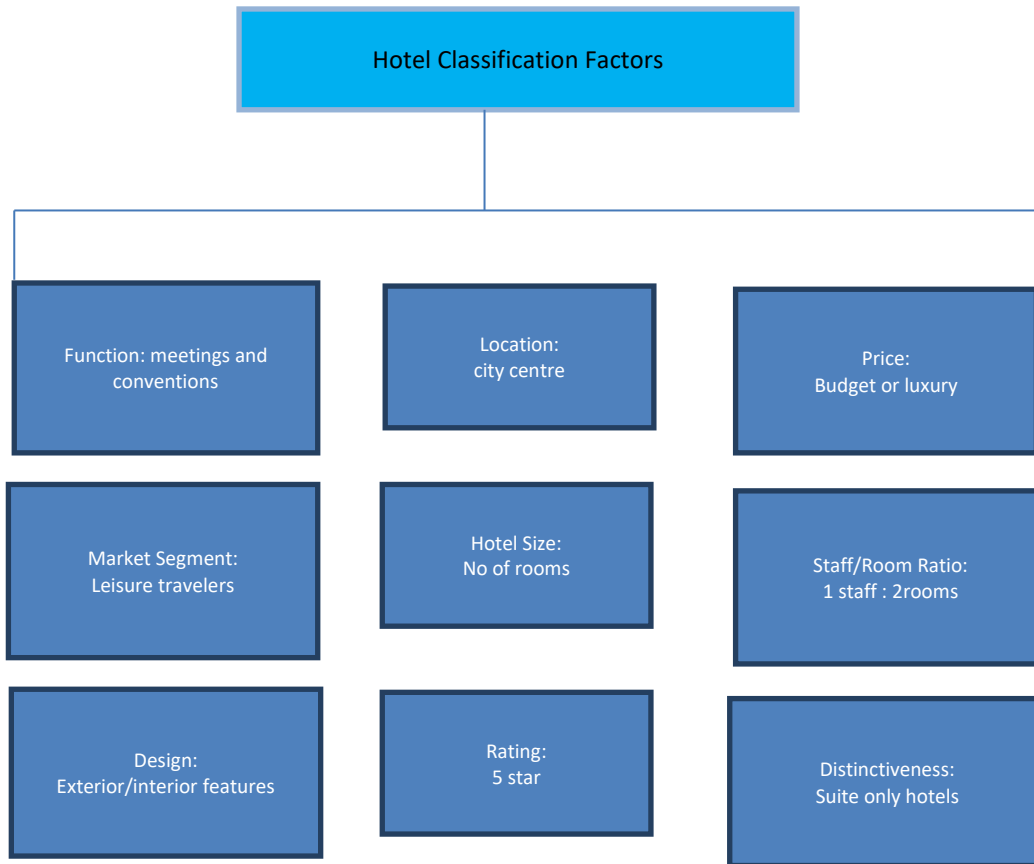

Fig: 1.5

Types of Accommodation

The following chart shows various types of accommodation used by travellers and their respective characteristics:

Name(s)	Characteristics
City centre hotels	These hotels are located within the heart of a city. The type may vary greatly from business, suites, residential, economy and mid-scale to luxury.
Suburban hotels	Suburban hotels tend to be smaller properties which usually provide a full service and are located in suburban areas.
Airport hotels	These hotels are designed especially to accommodate air travellers They offer a mix of facilities and amenities. The majority offer customers transportation to and from the airport.
Highway hotels Or Motels	They are designed for overnight stays for motorists, often with very basic facilities. The rooms usually have direct access to an open parking lot. They are often smaller than most hotels. They are located on the outskirts of towns and cities.
Convention hotels	These hotels can provide a large quantity of rooms. In addition to accommodation, they provide extensive meeting and function space for holding conventions. There are banquet areas within and around the hotel complex. Most of them provide an in-house laundry, a business centre, airport shuttle service, and 24-hours room service. They are often in close proximity to convention centres and other convention hotels.
Commercial hotels	They are located in downtown areas. They tend to be smaller than convention hotels. Meeting and function spaces are smaller, and there are fewer banqueting areas.
Resort hotels	These hotels are located in picturesque, sometimes remote settings. Customers travel long distances to resorts. Usually, they tend to stay longer. Resorts typically provide a comprehensive array of recreational amenities, as well as a variety of food & beverage outlets ranging from informal to fine-dining restaurants.
Spa hotels	They are located in resort-type settings or as part of city spa hotels. They provide accommodation, spa treatments, programmes and cuisine. Programmes offered vary widely. They may include relaxation/stress management, fitness, weight management grief/life change and pilates/yoga. Spas have professional staff who often include dieticians, therapists, masseurs, exercise physiologists and, in some cases, physicians.
Casino hotels	They have gambling operations which are the major revenue centres. They also provide live entertainment. A wide variety of luxury amenities, hotel services including fine and casual dining and shopping centres are typically available on site.

All-suite hotels	The guest rooms in these hotels are larger than normal hotel rooms, with separate areas for working, sleeping and relaxing. A living area or parlour is typically separated from the bedroom, and some properties offer a kitchen set-up in the rooms. The amenities and services can vary widely. They can be found in various locations such as urban, suburban, or residential.
Boutique hotels	Boutique hotels differentiate themselves from traditional hotels and motels by providing personalised accommodation and services/facilities. They are sometimes known as "design hotels" or "lifestyle hotels". Prices vary greatly. They are very different in their "look and feel" from traditional lodging properties. They are more intimate and, perhaps, more luxurious, and stand out as individual. The amenities vary greatly depending on the hotel's environment and the theme chosen. For example, a boutique hotel may not offer Wi-Fi Internet, air conditioning, or cable/pay TV if it is focused on comfort and solitude.
Timeshares or Vacation ownership	This is a type of shared ownership where a buyer purchases the right to use the property for a portion of each year. In many cases when the timeshare is purchased, the buyer receives a deed. This indicates that the buyer can use the property each year at the time specified for the number of years based on the deed, and the purchase can be handed down to the buyer's heirs.
Historic conversion hotels	These properties have historic significance. They have been converted into lodging establishments with the retention of their historic character.
Extended-stay hotels or Serviced Apartments	These properties cater to customers who stay for an extended period. They usually offer full kitchen facilities, shopping services, business services and limited housekeeping services.
Bed and breakfast inns (B&Bs)	They are usually family-owned, private homes whose owner lives on or near the premises and rents out rooms to overnight customers. The paid accommodation typically include breakfast. A popular term is "B&Bs" (i.e. bed and breakfast provided). The host often provides customers with assistance regarding directions and information about the local area including sightseeing suggestions. They are usually located in rural areas and villages.
Guest houses	Guest houses are similar to bed and breakfast inns. They range from low-budget rooms to luxury apartments. They tend to be like small hotels in bigger cities. Although the facilities are limited most rooms are air-conditioned with en-suite shower and toilet.
Hostels	They are very cheap accommodation. The sleeping arrangements are usually in dormitory style and there may also be self-catering facilities on site.

Cabins	They are bedrooms for passengers on a ship or train.
Villas or Chalets (usually found in skiing and beach resorts)	They are self-catering accommodation in private bungalows, usually rented to prestigious or renowned customers. In many cases, the name refers to a small cottage with an overhanging roof in a seaside resort, e.g. beach houses.

Table 1.2—Types of Accommodation

The Accommodation Product

Accommodation is the core product of a hotel and is always one of the largest revenue sources in a hotel operation.

Accommodation products refer to rooms and other related products or services that hotel guests will consume during their stays. Front-line staff, especially receptionists and reservation staff, should be equipped with product knowledge which enables them to recommend or explain to their guests what is being offered by the hotel. Some basic concepts about the accommodation products, including bed types, room types and room rates, are described in this section.

1) Types of Room

Room types in hotels vary in their grading, features and functions. Receptionists and reservation staff should be familiar with all different room types and their characteristics in order to achieve a perfect guest-to-room fit.

a) Differences in Room Grading

The grading of rooms is generally divided into three categories. Table 2.4 illustrates how different rooms are graded in a typical hotel.

Grade	View	Furniture / Amenities / Supplies	Extra services / products
Standard	Average, e.g. garden view, car park view	Basic setting, e.g. pine furniture, bed with blanket only, disposable paper slippers, etc.	Nil
Superior	Superior, e.g. city view, sea view	Upscale setting, e.g. rosewood furniture, bed with comforter, cloth slippers, etc.	e.g. complimentary newspaper, complimentary breakfast, etc.
Deluxe	Magnificent,	Grand setting, e.g.	e.g. free access to executive

	e.g. sea view at high floor, attraction view	antique furniture, bed with feather comforter leather slippers, etc.	and its services, express check-in, welcome drinks, complimentary breakfast, free in-room internet and wi-fi services, free limousine pick-up service from the airport, etc.
--	--	--	--

Table 1.3 Examples of Room Grade in a Hotel

(Adapted from www.sleeping-around.com/practical/hotel_room_types.)

b) Common Types of Room

In addition to the room types mentioned in the above, more room types are available for guests' selection according to their needs and preferences. Table 2.5 shows a comprehensive list of room types commonly provided by hotels worldwide.

Types of Room	Descriptions
Single Room	A room that sleeps only one person and has been fitted with a single, double or queen-size bed.
Twin Room	A room that can accommodate two persons with two twin beds.

Double Room	A room that can accommodate two persons with a double or queen-size bed.
Double-Double Room	A room that can accommodate two to four persons with two twin, double or queen-size beds.
Triple Room	A room that can accommodate three persons and has been fitted with three twin beds, one double bed and one twin bed or two double beds.
Hollywood Twin Room	A room that can accommodate two persons with two twin beds joined together by a common headboard. Medium tariff and budget hotels tend to provide many of these room settings which cater for both couples and parties of two.
Studio / Murphy Room	A room that is fitted with a sofa bed or a Murphy bed (i.e. a bed that folds out of a wall or closet) which can be transformed from a bedroom in night time to a living room in day time.
Suite	A room with one or more bedrooms and a living space. The bedrooms might be singles, doubles or twin doubles.
Presidential Suite	The most expensive room provided by a hotel. Usually, only one presidential suite is available in one single hotel property. Similar to the normal suites, a presidential suite always has one or more bedrooms and a living space with strong emphasis on grand in-room decoration, high-quality amenities and supplies and tailor-made services (e.g. personal butler during the stay).
Villa	A special form of accommodation which can be found in some resort hotels. It is a kind of stand-alone house which gives extra privacy and space to hotel guests. A fully equipped villa contains not only bedrooms and a living room but also a private swimming pool, Jacuzzi and balcony. It is suitable for couples, families and large groups.

Accessible Room	This room type is mainly designed for disabled guests and it is required by law that hotels provide a certain number of accessible rooms to avoid discrimination. The room setting of an accessible room is different from other standard rooms for guests' convenience. Common features include safety bars and emergency buttons in the bedroom and bathroom, touch floor lamps, fire alarm lights, and outward opening door for bathroom etc. The rooms should always be located on ground or lower floors and should be near to the elevators for easier accessibility of disabled guests. This room type is also suitable for seniors.
Balcony Room	A room with a balcony.
Executive-Floored Room	A room located at the 'executive floor' which enables convenient access to the executive lounge. Some hotels also provide 'female executive floors' with their rooms assigned to female guests only for safety and security reasons.
Room for Extended Stay	This room type can be found in service apartments and hotels which cater for long-stay guests (e.g. expatriates). Open kitchens or cooking equipment are usually available in the room. Some also provide housekeeping services (e.g. once a week) on a regular basis
Smoking / Non-Smoking Room	Many hotels provide both smoking and non-smoking rooms for their guests. In order to minimise the effects of second-hand smoke exposure on non-smoking guests, some hotels group all smoking rooms on certain floors and separate them from non-smoking rooms.
Adjacent Room	Rooms close by or across the corridor, but not side by side.
Adjoining Room	Rooms that are side by side, but without a connecting door between them.
Connecting Room	Two rooms that are side by side and have a connecting door between them.

Table 1.4— Hotel Room Types

2) Types of Bed

A hotel has different types of guest rooms and beds for the guests to choose from. Hotel staff should explain these clearly to guests, as they may not be familiar with the hotel terminology.

Types of bed	Sizes (e.g.)
Twin	39" x 75"
Double	54" x 75"
Queen	60" x 80"
King	78" x 80"

Table 1.5—Types and sizes of bed

There are various kinds of differently-sized beds to cater for the needs of hotel guests. Some of them are particularly available in certain room types and are described in Table 1.5

Types of Bed	Symbols/ Codes	Sizes	Descriptions
Single / Twin	S / T	39"x75"	Designed for one person only; single and twin beds sized the same; the term 'twin beds' implies they are in pairs and the room type is always described as 'twin room'.
Double	D	54"x75"	Designed for two persons; easily confused with the term 'twin beds' in Chinese translation.
Queen	Q	60"x80"	Designed for two persons; wider and longer than double beds for better comfort of guests.
King	K	78"x80"	Designed for two persons; wider than queen beds for better comfort of guests.

Hollywood Bed	T	78"x75"	Two twin beds placed side by side and sharing the same headboard; designed for two persons.
Studio Bed / Sofa	H	48"x75"	Available in a studio room; it caters for the needs of business guests for conducting business meetings in the guest room.
Murphy Bed	M	60"x80"/ 78"x80"	It serves the same function as a sofa bed; the bed folds out of a wall or closet, which make it more convenient for guests to conduct business meetings in the guest room.
Roll-away Bed	/	30"x72"/ 34"x75"	Extra bed temporarily added according to Guest's request; extra charges are usually applied.
Baby Cot	/	/	Provided to those guests who bring their babies; usually requested in advance by guests in their reservations.

Table 1.6— Different Types of Bed in a Hotel

Twin bedroom

Double bedroom

Types of Hotel Guests

Hotel guests can be classified according to their:

Trip purpose	–	pleasure or business travellers
Numbers	–	independent or group travellers
Origin	–	local or overseas travellers

1) Leisure Travellers

These are individuals who travel to engage in leisure activities, outdoor recreation, relaxation, visiting friends and relatives or attending sports or cultural events.

2) Corporate Business Travellers

These are individuals whose frequent bookings are usually made by enterprises at reduced room rates. Business travellers travel to conduct business, attend business meetings or workshops, and engage in selling or purchasing products.

3) Free Independent Travellers (FITs)

These are sometimes referred to as "foreign independent travellers ". FITs are international tourists who purchase their own accommodation and make their own travel arrangements.

4) Group Inclusive Tours (GITs)

Some tourists travel together on package tours with accommodation and sometimes meals, booked through travel agents. Group tourists tend to spend less and budget their spending allowance.

5) Domestic Tourists

These are local residents who stay at hotels for special occasions and functions.

6) Conference Participants

These are individuals who travel to attend conferences and whose accommodation is usually reserved by themselves, their enterprise or a conference organiser before their arrival.

7) Very Important Persons (VIPs)

Very important persons may include celebrities, frequent-stay guests, guests in expensive rooms, guests with security risks and top executives from enterprises.

8) Incognito

These are guests who stay in hotels but conceal their identities to avoid being noticed and receiving formal attention.

Types of Guest Requests

i. Guests with Special Needs

- Wheelchairs;
- Facilities for the disabled.

ii. Business Travellers

- Broadband Internet service;
- International direct dialling (IDD) service;
- Local & international newspapers;
- Laundry/valet service;
- Shoe-polishing service;
- Other business facilities, e.g. business centre, executive floor, fax machine, laptop computer, conference and meeting facilities.

iii. Leisure Travellers and Holidaymakers

- Rollaway bed/ baby cot;
- Connecting rooms;
- In-room movies;
- Sports facilities, e.g. gymnasium, swimming pool;
- Spa facilities for beauty and health treatments, e.g. massage, hydrotherapy, facials and intensive foot and hand therapies;
- Baby-sitting service.

iv. Other Requests

- In-room dining (room service);
- Doctor service;
- Smoke-free guest room;
- Room make-up service;
- Alteration & mending service;
- Repair and maintenance service;
- Food & beverage enquiries, e.g. hours and location of meals.

Hotel Ownership

Another way to classify hotels is by their ownership, which can be any of the following:

1) Private

An independent hotel owned by a person/partnership/private enterprise, e.g. Shamrock Hotel.

2) Local Group

Several hotels owned by a local enterprise; e.g. Harbour Grand Hong Kong, the Kowloon Hotel, Harbour Plaza Hong Kong, Harbour Plaza Metropolis, Harbour Plaza North Point and Harbour Plaza Resort City are all owned by Harbour Plaza Hotels & Resorts.

3) International Group

A hotel which is part of an international chain of hotels; e.g. JW Marriott Hotel Hong Kong is part of Marriott International, Inc.

Modes of Hotel Management

Hotels can be operated in one of the following ways:

1) Independently Owned and Operated

These can be independent hotels, with no affiliation, that are managed by the owners of the properties.

2) Management Contract

Management contracts are hotel management enterprises which operate properties owned by other entities. In some cases, the hotel owners may arrange to run their properties through a management contract with an enterprise that specialises in managing hotels. This is done because the owner may lack:

- The necessary expertise
- The desire to become involved in the operation of the hotel.

Below is a summary of advantages and disadvantages of management contracts to both hotel owners and management enterprises.

	Advantages of Management Contracts	Disadvantages of Management Contracts
Hotel Owners	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> -Acquisition of operational expertise which can reduce the chance of business failure and enhance the service quality; -Gain national or international recognition for the hotel if it operated by a reputable management enterprise; -The owners are not required to be involved in hotel's operations. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> -Loss of Operational control -Financially liable for all costs, expense and losses of the hotel; -The Management enterprise may have less incentive and morale in managing the hotel if only a fixed management fee is paid without any sharing of profits.
Management Enterprises	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> -Receive a management fee during the contract period regardless of the hotel performance; -Little or no up-front financing or equity involved; -Management contract period can last for five, ten or twenty years; 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> -Over-dependence on owner for providing necessary funds in operations; -Minimum input in ownership decisions, such as the transfer of hotel ownership from the owner to another buyer; -No extra rewards for good business performance if the management contract is run in a free structure without any incentives schemes;

Table 1.7 – Advantages and Disadvantages of Management Contract to Owners and Management Enterprises

3) Franchising

Some investors prefer to use the franchising concept to run the hotel. Franchising in the hospitality industry is a concept that:

- Allows interested investors to use a enterprise's (the franchisor) name and business format; It is made up of properties where the franchisees agree to run the hotel in accordance with the strict guidelines set by the franchisor.

- Allows an enterprise to expand more rapidly by using others' capital.

Below is a summary of advantages and disadvantages of franchising to both franchisees and franchisors.

	Advantages of Franchising	Disadvantages of Franchising
Franchisees	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> -Obtain from the franchiser the expertise in doing business such as site selection, planning, preopening training, operations, manuals, information management, central reservation system, field support, quality control, purchasing, advertising, marketing new products and concepts; -Acquire a brand name with regional or national recognition; -The franchisee has complete control over and responsibility for the daily operation of the property. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> -Need to follow the standard set by franchisors with no tolerance of modifications in operations; -Need to pay a joining fee and an on-going fee, which means sacrificing some of the revenues; -Risk of termination or contract or no continuation of new contract franchisor wants to take back the rights of operation.
Franchisors	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> -Receive a joining fee and an on-going fee from the franchisee; -Expand the business and market share more rapidly without heavy investment; -Lower the risk of business loss by using franchisee's investment to expand the chains in new locations and markets. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> -Franchisee may fail to follow the standard set by the franchisors and thus effect the quality of services provided to customers; -The trade name may be spoiled by inappropriate franchisees; -The franchisor has to disclose the confidential information to franchisees, and this may constitute a risk to the business.

Table 1.8 – Advantages and Disadvantages of Franchising to Franchisees and Franchisors

4) Referrals

Referral associations, e.g. Leading Hotels of the World (LHW), offer hotels similar benefits to those of franchising, but at a lower cost. Some hotels choose to become referral properties. This means that the property is being operated as an independent hotel in association with a certain chain. These hotels refer guests to one another's properties and share a centralised reservation system and a common logo, image or advertising slogan. Hotels pay an initial fee to join a referral association and further fees are based on services required. As the property has already been physically developed, the owner may want assistance only with marketing, advertising, management, or reservation referral. In addition, guests may find more variation among the referral properties as size and appearance standards are less stringent than those in a franchise agreement. However, every hotel is assessed and checked regularly to ensure that it maintains the highest standards.

Hotel Departments

Classifications of Hotel Departments

Besides classifying units or departments according to their functions, as mentioned in the previous section, two other types of classification are commonly used to describe the nature of hotel departments:

- i. 'Revenue-centred' and 'Cost-centred' Departments;
- ii. 'Front-of-the-house' and 'Back-of-the-house' Departments.

a) Revenue-Centred and Cost-Centred Departments

Instead of segmenting a hotel structure into departments according to their functions, some hotels will also group their departments or units into two different categories: revenue centres and cost centres. 'Revenue centres' refer to those departments or units which generate direct income for the hotel through the provision of goods and services to guests, e.g. front desk, restaurants, room service, gift shop and business centre.

'Cost centres', which are also interpreted as 'support centres', mainly assist the functioning of revenue centres without generating any direct income for the hotel, e.g. human resources, purchasing, accounting and engineering departments. This classification is particularly useful for the accounting department in summarising the performances of different units under these two main categories.

b) Front-of-the-House and Back-of-the-House Departments

Besides the revenue-centred and cost-centred classifications, it is quite common for hotels to group their units or areas into 'front-of-the-house' and 'back-of-the-house'.

'Front-of-the-house' refers to those departments or areas which are accessible and visible to guests, e.g. front-desk counters, restaurants, concierge and bell services. They are the points of service encounters where service staff usually have direct contacts and interactions with guests.

'Back-of-the-house', in contrast, refers to those departments or areas which rarely have staff-to-guest interactions, e.g. kitchen, housekeeping, human resources and engineering departments. It should be emphasised that some 'back-of-the-house' positions will also come across and interact with guests. For example, a room attendant may meet a guest while cleaning the guest rooms. However, they are not considered as 'front-of-the-house' positions since their major duty is room cleaning rather than communicating with the guests.

Organisation of Hotel Departments and their Functions

The day-to-day operations of a hotel are the key factors determining the success or failure of its service. It is necessary to understand the structure of hotels in order to gain an overview of how the organisation fits together.

Fig: 1.6 Major departments of a 5-star Hotel

Regardless of the size of a hotel, the organisational structure will be essentially the same. It is usually divided into several distinct departments, each responsible for a particular area of work. The larger the hotel and the more facilities it offers, the more specialised the departments become. For example, the front office and housekeeping department are under the control of the director of rooms.

a) The Duties of Key Executives

General Manager

The main responsibilities of the general manager (GM) include:

- Providing leadership to the management team;
- Coordinating the work of all departments;

- Participating in the formulation of hotel policies and strategies;
- Leading the hotel staff in meeting the financial, environmental and community responsibilities;
- Assuming full responsibilities for the overall performance of the hotel.

Resident Manager

The main responsibilities of the resident manager include:

- Holding a major responsibility for developing and executing plans developed by the owner(s), the general manager and other members of the management team;
- Checking on operations, providing feedback and offering assistance when needed;
- Completing, reviewing and summarising statistical reports and sharing them with the general manager;
- Assuming responsibilities for the daily operations and management of the hotel.

b) Functions of Major Hotel Departments

i. Engineering

The engineering department is responsible for maintaining the physical plant of the hotel, such as electricity, plumbing, air conditioning, and heating and elevator systems, and for overseeing all mechanical and technical conditions of the hotel.

ii. Security

Security is an important concern in every hotel. The security department is responsible for implementing procedures which aim to ensure the safety and security of hotel guests, visitors, hotel employees and the hotel itself. Examples include monitoring surveillance equipment, patrolling the hotel premises and maintaining security alarm systems.

iii. Human Resources

The human resources (personnel and training) department is responsible for hiring, orientation, training, wages and benefit administration, labour relations, employee relations, and staff development.

iv. Food and Beverage

The food and beverage (F&B) department provides food and beverage services to the hotel guests and visitors through a variety of outlets and facilities/services. Examples include lounge, bar, coffee shop, restaurants, banquet service, room service (also called in-room dining) and cake shop.

v. Sales and Marketing

The main functions of the sales and marketing department involve generating new business for the hotel, coordinating advertising, and undertaking sales promotions and public relations activities to enhance the hotel's image.

vi. Accounts

The accounts department is headed by the financial controller who, as a key member of the management team, can guide the hotel to increased profitability through better control and asset management. In addition, this department is responsible for monitoring all the financial activities of a hotel. Examples include overseeing accounts receivable, accounts payable, payroll, and cost control systems of the hotel; keeping records of assets, liabilities and financial transactions of the hotel; preparing the monthly profit-and-loss statement; coordinating with the purchasing department and information technology department; and handling guests' inquiries about billing.

Further Reading:

- ✓ NCHMCT JEE Hotel Management & Catering (Latest Edition), (2021), By EduGorilla Prep Experts
- ✓ Guide for Hotel Management, (2021), By Arihant Experts
- ✓ Mastering Hospitality: A Luxury Hotelier's Guide To Career and Leadership Success, (2021), By Iwan Dietschi